

Time for their White Coats

The School of Medicine celebrated the latest class of medical students to enter the more clinical phase of their education with two White Coat ceremonies, including the first ever for the school's new St. Joseph Campus. Read about the ceremonies here.

Back to school

Even during a pandemic, fall is always an energized time at the School of Medicine, and now at our St. Joseph campus, too.

The dean's message

InDOctrination

First-year students join their docent units and hear from Dean Jackson, Brenda Rogers and this year's winner of the Richard Garcia Memorial Award.

Off to a good start

Service shapes career

Tyson Becker (M.D. '01), now an Army colonel, remembers his time as a surgical resident at Walter Reed Hospital on 9/11.

Answering the call

More 9-11 memories

Within hours of the twin towers' collapse, Stephanie Evers (M.D. '00), was on her way to New York to help with search and rescue.

Olathe physician recalls

Inclusive newsletter

The Collective newsletter details the efforts of the Office of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion.

Read all about it

Boosting diversity

A new program to support Latinx medical students pairs them with physician mentors.

Encouraging connections

McNabney mourned

Longtime faculty member and Truman Medical Centers emergency medicine pioneer W. Kendall McNabney dies.

Read his obituary